SETTING

The former stable is set back from the road on the north side of Fairview Road, directly west of its intersection with Barton Road. Saltwater Creek is to the north of the property. Two other scheduled heritage items (cool store/glasshouse & washhouse) stand close by. The extent of setting is limited to the immediate setting of the three heritage items, rather than the land parcel as a whole.

HISTORY

Edwin Butchers (aka Butcher, 1840-1913) was born in Kent, England and emigrated to New Zealand in 1864. He commenced farming at Fairview in 1872, two years before he married Mary Ann Lawrence (died 1906). The couple had five children. Edwin Butchers farmed and established a commercial orchard on his property, which included a cob homestead and outbuildings. Butchers left an estate valued at £7575 when he died in 1913, at which time he was said to be the oldest resident in Fairview. A 1999 subdivision created the parcel on which the former stable is now located. The property was still in family ownership in the early 21st century.

HISTORICAL AND SOCIAL SIGNIFICANCE

The former Butchers' stable has historical significance for its association with the Butchers family and the development of agriculture and horticulture in the area.

CULTURAL AND SPIRITUAL SIGNIFICANCE

The former Butchers' stable has cultural value as a demonstration of the practice of colonial farming in the district.

ARCHITECTURAL AND AESTHETIC SIGNIFICANCE

The former Butchers' stable has architectural significance as a vernacular farm building designed to be fit for purpose. It is assumed that Edwin Butchers designed and built the structure, possibly drawing upon the vernacular building traditions of his home county in England.

TECHNOLOGICAL AND CRAFTSMANSHIP SIGNIFICANCE

The former Butchers' stable has technological and craftsmanship significance for its cob construction and timber detailing. Cob was a popular colonial building material and the cob outbuildings on the Butchers' property are notable survivors of their type and age.

CONTEXTUAL SIGNIFICANCE

The former Butchers' stable has contextual significance as one of three historic cob buildings on the site of Butchers' orchard and farm. The buildings are visible from Barton Road, directly opposite the Barton Rural School.

ARCHAEOLOGICAL AND SCIENTIFIC SIGNIFICANCE

As the former stable pre-dates 1900 its site has potential archaeological significance relating to the structure's construction and the development of the Butchers' property.

SUMMARY OF HERITAGE SIGNIFICANCE

The former Butchers' stable has overall heritage significance to Claremont and Timaru district as a whole. The building has historical significance for its association with Edwin Butchers and his successful orchard and cultural value as a demonstration of the way of life of several generations of the same family. The former Butchers' stable has architectural significance as a vernacular farm building and technical and craftsmanship significance for its cob construction using material sourced on the property. The former Butchers' stable has contextual significance as a local historic feature and in relation to two other cob buildings on the site. The former Butchers' stable has potential archaeological significance in view of its pre-1900 date of construction.
