PHYSICAL DESCRIPTION

One-and-a-half storey farm building with gabled roofs and rectangular footprint. Square door and window openings; weatherboard cladding at first floor above open shelter divided into three bays by timber posts. Cathead over gable end loading door on south elevation. Single-storey section at north end.

MATERIALS/STRUCTURE

Limestone, timber & corrugated iron.

ADDITIONS/ALTERATIONS

Unknown, if any.

SETTING

The granary stands within a cluster of farm buildings at the western terminus of a driveway coming off the west side of Cleland Road, immediately south of its intersection with Middle Road. The current homestead is located to the south-east. The extent of setting is limited to the immediate setting of the granary, stable and former homestead (heritage items 76 & 73), rather than the land parcel as a whole. The setting for the 1903 homestead (heritage item 74) is separate from that of the former homestead and farm buildings cluster.

HISTORY

A rural section in the Totara Valley was purchased by Charles Shaw in c.1870. CR Shaw (1829-1906) emigrated from England to New Zealand, after four years in Australia, in 1857. He worked for the provincial government as a district surveyor on Banks Peninsula for four years and then transferred to Timaru in 1861. Shaw was twice married and had 14 children; his primary residence appears to have always been in or near Timaru. Shaw's son Geoffrey (c.1857-1920) farmed at Sterndale until it was sold to TB Garrick in 1898. The latter built a new homestead in 1903. Tertius Bruce Garrick (c.1869-1941) served on the Levels County Council, the Timaru Harbour Board, and was a director on a number of companies. After his death the Fraser family purchased the property in 1942 and has run an Angus cattle stud on it ever since.

HISTORICAL AND SOCIAL SIGNIFICANCE

The 'Sterndale' granary has historical significance for its association with the Shaw, Garrick and Fraser families, and farming operations on the property and, more generally, in Totara Valley.

CULTURAL AND SPIRITUAL SIGNIFICANCE

The 'Sterndale' granary has cultural value as a demonstration of the way of life of the building's users since it was erected.

ARCHITECTURAL AND AESTHETIC SIGNIFICANCE

The 'Sterndale' granary has architectural significance as an example of a Victorian farm building rendered in permanent materials. The weatherboard upper section adds texture to the building's appearance, at the same time as it lightens the wall load, thus allowing for large openings at ground floor level.

TECHNOLOGICAL AND CRAFTSMANSHIP SIGNIFICANCE

The 'Sterndale' granary has technological and craftsmanship significance for its locally quarried, stone masonry construction. A number of other limestone houses, farm buildings and bridges in the area attest to the use of the local building stone in the 1870s and 1880s.

CONTEXTUAL SIGNIFICANCE

The 'Sterndale' granary has contextual value as a historic feature within a farm property that includes three other scheduled heritage items.

ARCHAEOLOGICAL AND SCIENTIFIC SIGNIFICANCE

As the granary pre-dates 1900 its site has potential archaeological significance relating to the structure's construction and the development of pastoralism in the Totara Valley.

SUMMARY OF HERITAGE SIGNIFICANCE

The 'Sterndale' granary with dray shed has overall heritage significance to the Totara Valley and Timaru district as a whole. The granary has historical significance for its association with the Shaw, Garrick and Fraser families and their farming operations and cultural value as a demonstration of the way of life of its past and present users. The 'Sterndale' granary has architectural significance as a Victorian vernacular farm building and technological and craftsmanship significance for its masonry construction using locally quarried limestone. The 'Sterndale' granary has contextual value as a historic feature in relation to three other scheduled heritage items on the property. The 'Sterndale' granary has potential archaeological significance in view of its pre-1900 date of construction.
